Claims Handling, Forensic Services and Ethical Concerns

Plaza Terrace

Track: SIU

Session Description:

This class is intended to bring awareness to the claims adjuster of situations where ethical and moral concerns arise when forensic services are used in the claims handling process. A number of situational dilemmas are presented to the attending claims adjusters and then a discussion is made of what transpired and the ethical considerations and potential consequences are discussed. The class also sensationalizes that forensic service experts are neutral parties and are not advocates for the position that best serves their clients and must always provide opinions that are supported by witness statements and evidence. The attendee is fully made aware of the potential harm and damages that can be sustained by the consumer by anything contrary.

Speakers:
